Florida Boy Kills Two Burglars.

In a struggle early Saturday with two safe blowers, Paul Sauls, seventeen years of age, who was left to watch the postoffice building, at Talahasssee, Fla., shot and killed them both in the basement of the building. The boy was only slightly injured. The cracksmen, both of whom were white, have not been identified.

Lively Time Expected this Week

The dismissal of Gifford Pinchot, as Chief Forester of the United States will likely lead in news interest during the coming week. The next step in the controversy between Secretary Ballinger and the deposed forester will be the appointment of a Congressional committee to investigate the quarrel. The House has refused the privilege of this appointment to Speaker Cannon, but a resolution which would enable him to name the House members of the committee will be before the Senate this week, and the immediate battleground will be in that branch of the National Legislature.

—John Sharpe, the seventeen year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Sharpe, this county, residing at Jacksonton, died of blood poison and lockjaw from the effects of a gunshot wound in the foot while out hunting during the holidays. Young Mr. Sharpe was an excellent young man and his death was a shock to the community. The funeral services took place from the residence Friday.

—Judge Richard Henry Davenport, ninety-eight years old died at his home in Midway at 7:30 o'clock Friday night, from the infirmities of old age. Judge Davenport, who enjoyed the unique distinction of being the oldest citizen of Woodford county, celebrated his ninety-eighth birthday, December 23, last. During the day he received the congratulations and best wishes of quite a number of his relatives and friends.

—Wilbur Knox Master, son-in-law of Gen. Basil Duke, died at his home in Lakewood, N. J., Saturday morning of tuberculosis after an illness of about a year.

Increase Acreage.

It is estimated that an increased acreage of at least 15 per cent will be made in the tobacco crop alone in this county while the high prices being obtained for hogs and cattle will stimulate the production of corn. The wheat crop of the county should prove a money maker, the acreage being above the average, while the condition of the crop is excellent.

Lawson Wants the Burley Crop.

Thos. W. Lawson, the Boston millionaire, is in Lexington to negotiate with President Clarence Lebus of the Burley Tobacco Society for the purchase of the 1909 pool of the Society.

In an interview Mr. Lawson joked about court action and said that he might possibly have to appear there if he buys the pool. It is said he will offer twenty cents for the tobacco. He further said: "Our country is in a very 'prosperous' condition."

"Oh, yes, very, very prosperous," he continued, sarcastically.

"In fact we are now paying higher prices for our foodstuffs than ever before; our financiers are making more money than ever before; our people are going poorer dressed than ever before. Oh, yes it's quite a prosperous time we are having. Meanwhile Mr. Morgan continues to buy more big pictures and to add a few millions daily to his pile."

"I guess I'll have to take another slap at 'Uncle Joseph' Cannon in my little publication which I get out in Boston. The prosperity we are having reminds me of the story of the policeman and the burglars. Four men had robbed a house of everything except the stove. The policeman came up and asked them how business was. 'Prosperous' said the 'Jimmy Jabbers.' It was prosperous for the burglars but mighty hard picking for the people who owned the house just robbed. That's the way with all of us; its prosperous when we have lots of money and 'hard times' when we haven't."

Gratuitous Advertising.

Newspapers do more gratuitous work than any other class of people—work that ought to be paid for, but for which in many cases thanks are not even received. This is the fault of newspapers, for individuals and the public naturally want to get as much as possible for nothing, or for as little money as possible. The evil grows by what it feeds on. The publisher of every newspaper knows the fact. The Kentucky Press Association which met in Lexington a few days ago took official cognizance of the condition of things and adopted resolutions looking to reform along this line. If they are lived up to substantial good will come from it. The advertising columns of a newspaper are its chief stock in trade, and the publisher does himself an injustice who does not draw the line strictly between business and news. All notices calculated to advance private business interests ought to be confined to the advertising columns. A charge ought to be made for all notices of entertainments of every kind to which an admission fee is demanded. For years the News has been trying to work along this line. If newspapers are not as profitable as they ought to be in view of the time, money and labor spent to make them, the publishers of the same have themselves chiefly to blame for it. A reform can only be brought about by concert of action.

Loses Three Fortunes.

Rev. Henry W. Knickerbocker, preacher and miner, and at one time a partner of Nat Goodwin in Rawhide properties, has returned to the Methodist ministry at his old home in Louisiana.

Rev. Mr. Knickerbocker left the Methodist church and joined the Unitarians. He then went to Pomona and became pastor of the Unitarian church. Later he resigned and went into mining ventures. Three times he accumulated fortunes ranging from $25,000 to $150,000, but in each instance lost his money. His last venture was with Goodwin when after making $25,000, he quit penniless.

Afterward he became campaign speaker for the Independence League. Now word comes from Louisiana that he has rejoined the Methodists and is occupying his old pulpit.

Grady Attacks Hughes.

Senator Grady made a sensational attack on Governor Hughes in the New York Senate following the reading of the Governor's message. It was the Governor's proposal to penalize the practice of bookmaking that aroused the ire of the Senate minority leader.

He declared that while the Governor attacked the horse owner, the bookmakers and the man placing his bet upon a horse race, "he had never dared to attack the most monstrous gambling institution there is in the world, the New York Stock Exchange, and to the end of his career he will never have the courage to attack it."

"Let me call your attention," he said "to the kid gloved way in which the Governor handles Wall street," said Grady. "When he comes to speak of bookmaking, it is gambling and the distinction of gambling outside the track and inside the track have been obliterated—but when it comes to talk of Wall street gambling, the only gambling with which he is personally acquainted, and upon which he is an expert authority, then it becomes speculation, and he wishes to appoint a commission to inquire whether the most nefarious system of gambling which exists today in the State of New York can be reformed with advantage to the public."

The Governor's recommendation that legislation be enacted to abolish betting at race tracks struck men in New York with dismay. They stand to lose thousands of dollars if the suggestion is put into effect. Last year oral betting was little interfered with by the police. There was a drop in attendance and a decrease in betting, it is true, but not sufficient to keep many thousands from the track, and as the season advanced, a feeling of greater security had established itself and hopes of better patronage for another year found expression in larger stakes and more entries.

Bookmakers who suffer directly, whereas the racing men suffer indirectly through diminished attendance, were contending Wednesday night that betting can never be abolished, and that any legislative effort to prohibit it at the tracks will only result in more business for the pool rooms.

Resolution Worth Making.

The beginning of a new year is the time when many people make resolutions to reform in some way; to cut loose from some bad habit or to do better than they have been doing. A resolution worth making is suggested by an exchange as follows:

"Live within your income. If you can't afford it, do not attempt to live in the style of your richer neighbor. You will be certain to break down or fall by the wayside in the effort. There is no greater curse to people who are sensitive about such comparisons than a big debt without means to satisfy the same. You can do without many things you can't afford to buy, and feel all the better for it. Try to pay as you go or don't go too much. It is easy to buy a thing and have it 'charged,' but settling time will come; there may be disputed bills, and unpleasantness will follow. Pay cash if possible, it is better for buyer and seller. If these suggestions are carried out during the year, at its close many people who now read them will thank the newspapers for them."

Wants to Abolish Racing Commission.

Senator J. T. Smith, of Barren county, a hold over Republican, is preparing a bill which he will introduce asking for the abolition of the State Racing Commission. Senator Smith says that he, for one, does not exactly enjoy the reputation given Kentucky in the past as the home of racing, especially as it formerly was conducted. Now that bookmaking has been prohibited, thus presumably stopping the gambling which accompanies the races, he says he does not see the necessity of continuing the Racing Commission.

Just why the Commission cares to continue its existence is what is puzzling Senator Smith. That the Commission has presented each member of the Legislature with a handsomely bound report of the Commission, with the name of each individual member on the back in gold letters, causes Senator Smith to wonder just what it is wanting. He figures that there is "a nigger in the woodpile" of some character. As long as racing continues, Senator Smith thinks there will be gambling of some kind, and he wanted it stopped entirely.

Elderly People Helped Free

The last years of life are the sweetest, and yet the most difficult to prolong. It is then that the greatest care is exercised in maintaining bodily health. But the chief care should always be with regard to the food you eat and whether you are digesting it properly. You should not allow yourself to become constipated.

No doubt you have tried salts and cathartic pills, purgative tablets, etc., and have come to the conclusion that they are violent in action and do but temporary good. Listen, then, to the voice of experience with regard to a wonderful and mild laxative, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is not new, only we are trying to find new friends for it.

A. A. Feltz, of Johnston City, Ill., suffered from stomach trouble for six years and found his cure in Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. His wife uses it too with success. We could name hundreds of others. Some heard of it first through neighbors or friends; others through the doctor's offer to send any sufferer from a stomach, liver or bowel complaint a free sample bottle for trial, without charge. If you will send your name and address he will send you a trial bottle direct to your home. If it proves itself as he claims then continue the treatment by buying a 50-cent or $1 bottle of your druggist, as all of them sell it. Old people, like children, should look for purity, and it is well to mention that the purity of this remedy is vouched for with the U. S. government. Also, though a free bottle is sent to prove its merits, results are always guaranteed from the regular bottles bought of druggists, who will refund your money if it does not satisfy you. Send at least for the free test bottle today.

If there is anything about your ailment that you don't understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 500 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill.

So They Were Married

Hostess at her first postnuptial tea, the brand-new matron solemnly eyes the girls who clustered about the table and her tones were weighty and portentous.

"Girls," she said, "the most agonized morning of my life was my bridal morning—and George's. It's really quite a long story. You see, just as soon as my wedding day was decided upon and publicly announced, all my friends seemed to feel that it was up to them to help celebrate. Forthwith began a succession of showers, card parties, dinners and theaters, which was harder physical work and a bigger mental strain than anything I'd ever known.

"I would reach home about two o'clock in the morning from some northern suburb to meet myself starting out for a luncheon down near the Indiana line. During the salad course of that luncheon I would have to excuse myself to my outraged hostess and make tracks for Evanston, there to grace with my presence a library shower given in my honor. At six o'clock I was due at Oak Park, where a distant cousin was to give a dinner for me and following that ordeal was a theater party. A midnight supper downtown came next and the hour and a half that were left to me out of the 24 were passed with the hairdresser, who repaired the ravages of the day's hilarities.

"It was very evident that if I continued at the same rate reefs would have to be taken in all the garments of my trousseau," went on the brand-new matron. "George wanted me to go to a sanitarium, he's so unselfish. You know it would have killed him if I had gone away from him.

"The night before we were married," went on the brand-new matron, "another gave the bridal party dinner. The crowd of us danced and had music and talked till most three. And at nine next morning I was to be married—and George! It couldn't be a bit later, for the only train we could take left at ten. And I was determined, and so was George, to go nowhere but to Bois Rouge, Canada, where we had the dearest little log cabin right in the heart of a forest.

"I was too exhausted when I tumbled into bed to realize that on the morning I was to be married to George. I fell asleep like a clod, with no more romance about me than if I had been a lump of mortar. I was determined to get every minute of my allotted hours of sleep. There would be plenty of time to dream beautiful poems up at Bois Rouge, with George. Perhaps you girls can imagine my consternation at feeling myself yanked ruthlessly by the arm in what seemed to be about five minutes after I had gone to sleep and then seeing mother bending over me.

"Child, it's eight o'clock!" she gasped.

The words were like an electric shock. I leaped into my old shoes at one bound. I nabbed my comb and wound my hair in an antique coil at the nape of my neck, though my hat had been specially designed for the latest style of turban hairdressing.

The girl guests appreciated the catastrophe and looked profound sympathy.

"My old-rose color suit was the handiest," went on the brand-new matron, "and I slipped into it without so much as a glance in the mirror. I slid down the stairs, gulped a swallow of coffee in the kitchen and then rushed down the street, putting on a pair of soiled white chambray gloves, which I had grabbed in my excitement. I quaked as I neared the church, but with the courage born of desperation I pecked in at the door. Girls, there were no ushers in evidence, but scattered about the church, even in the ten front seats on the middle aisle, were visibly excited spectators. The organ was playing, and I nearly had a fit on the spot for fear some one would recognize me and give the signal for the wedding march!

"I wonder yet how I had the strength to get around to the rector's office, which adjoined the chancel. However, when I accomplished the feat, there I found George, disheveled and wild eyed, arrayed in a shiny old blue serge suit and a spotted tan spring overcoat with an automobile cap on the back of his head and crumpling in his hands a gray glove and a reddish brown one. He nearly expired from pure relief when he saw me.

"By that time it was a quarter to nine and it was evident that there was no time to lose. We called in a passing expressman and a maid who was hurrying to the corner grocery with an apron thrown over her head. With these as witnesses we were married. And after the splurge we had prepared!

"George called a taxicab, and just as we were making for the train we met the best man in an automobile, urging on a chauffeur who was breaking the speed limit scandalously. If luck held, the rest of my bridal party, and George's, probably gathered by noon." The brand-new matron stopped to laugh.

"But my troubles were all over. So were George's. Just as our train pulled out we telephoned mother to make all necessary explanations. Poor mother! It was rough on her! But you would have thought the people would have had sense enough not to hang around that church till one o'clock, wouldn't you?"

IN THE "SUN-KISSED" WEST

More or Less Authentic Tale That Duly Impressed the Man from the East.

I was talking with a Dakotan the other day, said an eastern man. "Speaking of farms," he said, "we have some sizable farms out in Dakota. Yes, sir, I've seen a man on one of our big farms start out in the spring and plow a straight furrow till fall. Then he turned around and harvested back."

"Wonderful!" said I.

"On our Dakota farms," he went on, "it's the usual thing to send young married couples out to milk the cows. Their children bring back the milk."

"Wonderful!" I repeated.

"Once," he said, "I saw a Dakota farmer's family prostrated with grief. The women were weeping, the dogs were barking, the children were squalling, and the tears ran down the farmer's cheeks as he hitched up his 20-mule team and drove off."

"Where was he going?" said I.

"He was going half-way across the farm to feed the pigs."

"Did he ever get back?" I asked.

"It isn't time for him yet," was the reply.—The Housekeeper.

OWL HOUSES WITHOUT LINING

One Peculiarity of Bird That Looks to Be the Wisest of the Feathered Tribe.

Owls' houses are for the most part quite without lining. Whether from design or pure laziness, the bones and skulls of small animals which they have killed are left scattered about the floor. Growsome playthings for the owl children! But one can scarcely imagine even a baby owl being anything but wise and dignified. It is easier to picture them apparently gravely musing on these skulls like monks in their dark cells.

Since so many of the owls have their homes in hollow trees, we might expect some of their near relatives, the hawks, to be inclined to live in the same way. One of them, the little sparrow hawk, does nest in the flicker's abandoned home and in comfortable knot holes. Once I found him quartered snugly in a branch which had decayed at the end where part had been broken off. This bird, too, is satisfied with perfectly bare walls and floor, though the floor consists of small chips left by the decaying wood or by some woodpecker.—St. Nicholas Magazine.

Where It Goes.

"That man made an immense fortune out of a simple little invention."

"Indeed! What did he invent?"

"Invent? Nothing, you dub! He was the promoter!"

The Modern Grandpa a Very Different Being from Those We Used to Read About.

"There are no more old people," said the man who studies types. "Of course women took the lead in abandoning age. It has been generally recognized for a long time that women were refusing to be relegated to chimney corners or steam radiator corners, and now I look in vain for old men. I mean men who are willing to accept age and infirmity and even to make capital of them. The modern man does not consider it a desirable thing to flaunt long white whiskers, rheumatic joints, a benign smile and the title of 'Grandpa.' The modern grandfather would much rather be called 'Dad' or 'Foxy' than 'Reverend Sir.' The up-to-date man of mature years is slim, thoroughly groomed, prefers to wear his face smooth, because thereby less grayness shows, is particular about the shade of his cravat, knows how to run an automobile, challenges his grandson at golf, sails his own boat, is useful at society affairs—where his polished deference is a pleasing contrast to the sometimes careless attentions of youth—gives sound advice on the stock market and enjoys life to the fullest."

Presented With Handsome Watch

Circuit Clerk W. H. Webb was telephoned from Frank & Co.'s yesterday afternoon to stop in the store after he had closed his office. Mr. Webb stopped in as requested and was much surprised when Mr. B. A. Frank, on behalf of the firm of Frank & Co., presented him with a very handsome double-face gold watch and fob with beautiful Masonic emblem attached. It was to show the appreciation and high esteem in which Mr. Webb was held by his old employers for whom he had been with for near 27 years, having left their service on January 3 to enter upon his duties as Circuit Clerk.
It is needless to say that Mr. Webb highly appreciated the handsome timepiece and still more the high esteem in which he is held by his old employers. It is a gift that he will cherish and prize until the end of time.

Stock Being Protected.

From what we can learn Bourbon farmers are protecting their live stock from the severe weather. Many are herding their sheep in tobacco barns, while cattle are sheltered by feeding sheds and straw stacks. The ground is still covered by ten inches of snow which is of great value, to the blue grass and wheat fields as a protection from the below zero weather we are having. It will also help the rotting of hemp.

Desperate Criminal in Paris Jail.

Will Leer, the desperate young negro criminal, who received two sentences to the penitentiary at the last term of the Bourbon Circuit Court, aggregating twenty years in confinement, has never been taking to Frankfort, but remains in the Paris jail, being securely shackled and occupying the death cell until he is taken to the pen by the authorities.

Leer in conversation with other prisoners, one day last week, stated that he would die before he would be taken to Frankfort and expressed regret he had not killed Jailer Judy before he vacated his office January 1. This information was conveyed to Jailer Joe Farris, who placed Leer where he could do neither himself nor anyone else any harm. Leer had for several days been acting curiously and threatened to do summary vengeance to the jailer if an opportunity presented itself or to commit suicide in order to escape the punishment that awaits him.

Jailer Farris searched Leer and found that he had dismantled the iron bed upon which he slept and had concealed in his clothes a piece of iron about a foot long. This was taken from the prisoner and until he is taken to Frankfort this week by Sheriff A. S.
Thompson, he will be closely guarded.

Billinger's Ax Falls Heavily.

Secretary Ballinger, of the Department of the Interior, Saturday suspended John N. Benedict, of the "Five Civilized Tribes" of Oklahoma, and three school supervisors, for neglect of duty and for permitting disgraceful conditions to exist at the Indian schools. Charges have been perferred against the suspended officials and a full investigation will be made.

Cold Weather Records in Paris.

Capt. James A. Stewart, the popular druggist, who has for years been with J. B. Wilson's drug store, has kept close watch on his thermometer and never fails to make a note of the standing of the mercury during cold weather, and we are indebted to him for this copy of his record, which dates back to '87, which reads as follows: January 3, 1887—5 below.

March 2, 1888—15 above.
February 23, 1889—8 above.
March 6, 1890—2 above.
November 1, 1891—15 above.
December 4, 1892—four above.
January 14, 1893—18 below.
January 25, 1894—6 below.
February 9, 1895—12 below.
February 20, 1896—2 below.
January 30, 1897—10 below.
December 6, 1898—6 below.
February 10, 1899—22 below.
February 17, 1900—zero.
December 21, 1901—10 below.
February 5, 1902—2 above.
February 19, 1903—10 below.
January 2, 1904—2 above.
February 14, 1905—8 below.
February 7, 1906—2 below.
December 12, 1907—18 above.
February 2, 1908—four below.
February 1, 1909—2 above.
January 10, 1910. 10 below.

Mr. Stewart's thermometer has hung all these years at the front door of Wilson's drug store, and the above is true record of the coldest days in Paris from 1887 up to the present year.
The last big snow that fell here before the present one was on March 4 and 5 1902. It was twelve inches deep with drifts from two to six feet in depth.

A few thermometers in town registered twelve below. The record before this is shown above when the thermometer registered twenty-two below on February 10, 1889.

HENS THAT POISONED FISH

Ez Cobb Tells About Pets That Had Brains and Knew How to Use Them.

"Pshaw!" said Ez Cobb, a Barkersville poultry fancier, when he read about a hen owned by H. C. Spaulding of Colebrook, digging bait for her owner when he had the fishing fever. "That's nothing. I've got some Rhode Island reds that poisoned fish to death because the fish stole worms from 'em."

"How did they do that?" demanded an incredulous listener.

"I have a deep spring in an open lot," replied Ez. "The fish I kept in it got so wise that they dug their own worms. The earth at the edges of the spring had lots of worms, and whenever a fish saw one crawling out of the ground he would jump out of the water and grab it. My Rhode Island reds, in scratching about the spring saw what the fish were doing. 'Now, what do you think those murderous hens did?' They went to my potato patch, where I'd put Paris green. They got their bills full of poison, went back to the spring and washed their bills free of the Paris green. I tried hard to get the poison out of the spring, but I was too late. It dissolved. The next morning all the fish were dead."

"Now, the hens have the worms, and we don't dare drink from the spring. And some people say that chickens haven't any brains."

Get Value Received.

"There should be no hesitation in demanding fair treatment at every point. Favor is for the few, but we all have a right to expect the full value of the money we spend. When we are not receiving it we should protest in unmistakable fashion. We need not lose temper, for there are mild methods of conveying, unmistakably, displeasure and determination to mend matters. I have not forgotten the lesson I learned at a butcher's stall early in my housekeeping career."

"I was searching for beef to roast when the salesman, who was bringing a piece for inspection, was stopped by a fellow-workman, who demanded the piece of meat for a customer whom he described as fussy as the dickens. That was the only piece in the place which he dared to send out to his fussy patron—it was the only one I would take, then—but as possession is nine points of the law, I won. Incidentally, I enrolled myself in the fussy class, and was always treated well."

Huldah's
Revolution

By Phoebe Willey Densel

(Copyright, by Short Stories Co., Ltd.)

Huldah Alden stood in the doorway of the substantial, comfortable-looking farm house, watching her brother and his family drive through the big gate and down the bright, sunlit road.

Her heart was filled with rebellion as she drank in the fragrance of the outdoor life around her. She was a gentle soul and all her life had yielded her own will to someone else. Years before, when Huldah was a young, fair-faced girl, a dream of love had come to her, wherein she had seen herself the mistress of William Jewett's home and the mother of a flock of laughing, bright-eyed children. But her mother had frowned upon the youthful lovers, and after that Huldah's life had been graver and duller than ever. The years glided swiftly by, and Huldah Alden passed quickly from her rosy and white girlhood into a spiritless and dull old maidenhood. All the brightness and beauty had been crushed from her life by the indomitable will of her mother, and a patient endurance had taken its place. But always the thought had been with her that some time there would be a change, when she would be free to live her own life in her own way. She had been a dutiful daughter, but she knew that life held something sweeter and better than anything she had known, and she had always dreamed of some time surrounding herself with the peace and happiness, the beauty and brightness that had always been denied her. But when old Mrs. Alden had died, and Huldah was beginning to see stray gleams of sunshine lighting the grayness of her life, her brother, who possessed many of the characteristics of his mother, had closed the old house and taken his sister home with him. He and his wife had talked the matter over and decided that "Huldah wasn't fit to live alone no more'n a ten-year-old girl," and so

John Alden had taken her home to live with him and refused to let her go back and live alone, as she had begged to do.

Huldah parted the head of the big black dog that lay dozing in the warm sunshine on the door-step. Maje was old and rheumatic and almost past his days of usefulness, but his mistress had brought him with her when she came to her brother's house, and many times since, old Maje had journeyed back across the fields and pastures to his old home. She watched her brother as he drove along the moist country road until a sudden turn, in a heavy growth of trees, hid him from her view. Then her glance wandered slowly across the wide fields and sunny pastures to the distant hill on whose green slope stood the little red house that her mother had left her. The house was hidden from Huldah's sight by a grove of birch whose leaves were beginning to show, here and there, a glint of yellow in their greener shadows. And as she looked, the old house seemed to be holding out invisible, but loving arms to her, and she could hear faint, but insistent voices calling her back to its familiar shelter. And as she stood there, looking and listening, there flashed into her faded blue eyes a childish gleam of triumph, at the thought of John Alden's wrath when he discovered what she had done.

"Come, Maje," she called, as she turned to go in. "We'll go back home to-day, an' what's more, we'll stay there, too. I guess we're old enough to know what we want. I ruther think we can take care of ourselves without nobody's halpin' us. Poor old fellow! you'll be just as thankful to git back home as I'll be."

Huldah went into the buttery and proceeded to fill a basket with a substantial luncheon of cold beans and brown bread and doughnuts for herself and Maje, while the old dog watched each movement with an eager and interested air. Then carefully clearing the kitchen stove so that no sparks could fly out and set fire to anything, she shut and locked the door, and then, placing the key in its accustomed hiding place, under a flat stone by the door, the two travelers took their way across the fields to their old home.

As Huldah stooped to get between the rails of the first fence, she saw a woman coming through the field toward her. "Good land!" she exclaimed. "I believe that's Mary Ann Record—yes, 'tis. I wonder where she's goin'! Where you bound to,

And Mary Ann the usual

"My sake! Is that you, Huldah Alden?" was the answer. "I should like to know where you've started for? I'm out after a little more pennyroyal; you know it's good 'till the first frost comes—an' I was afraid I didn't hev 'nough to last; so many set sech store by it that I allers like to hev plenty on hand. But where be you an' old Maje goin'?"

"I'll tell you, Mary Ann Record, jest where we're goin'! We're goin' back home where we belong. I'm sick an' tired of allers doin' what somebody else tells me, an' now I'm goin' to be my own mistress an' live in my own house an' see how 'twill seem to do things es other folks do."

"Well, there, Huldah," said her companion, "I think you're doin' jest right. You never hev had a chance to take any comfort, an' I hope you'll never go back to John Alden's to live."

Together the two old friends walked slowly across the long pasture. The pungent odor of tansy, checkerberry and sweet fern arose from the bruised herbage under their feet.

Presently they reached the boundary of the field where Mrs. Record's quest ended, and Huldah paused for a few parting words.

"Now, Huldah," said her companion impressively, "you jest stick to it an' don't you never go back to John's, no matter what he says. Massey sakes! You dunno how much comfort you'll take when you git back home an' can do jest as you please."

"No, I'm free now," was Huldah's answer, "an' I'm goin' to live my life in my own way after this. All my life long my soul's be'n in bondage, but now it's goin' to be different. I tell you, Mary Ann, all summer I've been tryin' to get spunk 'nough to take this step. I never reely thought I'd dare to, but now I hev, an' John an' Clarindy can never make me go back. Thank the Lord I've got means 'nough to last me, an' I can be free an' independent. I don't believe I ever see quite so nice a mornin' es this is, an' you, Mary Ann? Seems to me everythin' looks brighter an' prittier than it ever did before. Why can't you come over an' spend the day with me next week? I'll be settled by that time. I've laid out to hev lots of comp'ny this winter an' go visitin' too. Can't you come over next Wednesday?"

"Why yes, I dunno but I can," was the answer, "an' I'm goin' to bring over a couple of kittens. They'll be a sight o' comp'ny fur you, an' you uster to be monstrous fond o' cats when you was a girl."

"My! that will be nice," and a gratified smile spread over Huldah Alden's faded face. "I never had a cat, an' I uster want one above all things; now don't forget to come, an' bring two o' 'em."

And she and old Maje climbed the stone wall together and walked slowly up the hill on the other side. At last they came in sight of their goal. Then Maje gave an ecstatic yelp and bounded up the hill as fast as his tired old legs would carry him. Huldah followed more slowly, her hungry eyes drinking in every detail of the weather-beaten old house and its surroundings. As she opened the front gate, Huldah Alden's heart contracted with a sudden fear, for there, on the doorstep, in the shadow of the tall lilac, where she and William Jewett had said good-bye to their youthful hopes, was the figure of a man, his head bowed upon his hands in a dejected, discouraged attitude. Just then the old dog came around the corner of the house and with a joyous bark flung himself upon the motionless figure. As the man raised his head and patted old Maje, Huldah gasped weakly to herself: "My soul an' body! it's William Jewett! what shall I do? The Lord must hev sent him here to meet me when I came home," and her trembling limbs refused to carry her any farther. She still stood there in the gateway, holding on to the gate for support, as the man, turning his glance in that direction, saw the pale-faced trembling woman, watching him with a half-frightened look in her faded blue eyes. In that one glance he seemed to see and understand why she was there, and in another moment he was at her side. "Thank God, Huldah!" he began, "you hev come back—I hev waited an' watched so long fur you—I thought you'd never—" and a hoarse sob checked his utterance as he gathered her into his arms, while his whole frame shook with the emotion he was vainly trying to subdue. "There, there, Huldah," as the tears rolled down her cheeks.

"You poor little thing! don't you take on so; I'll look out fur you after this an' we'll take solid comfort. Godfrey might! but it makes me mad to think how you've allus be'n imposed on. I tell you Huldah, you can walk rough shod over me the rest o' your life to make up fur it."

"Oh, William, I jest knew the good Lord had sent you when I see you there in the same spot where we'd parted so many years ago. But I'm an old worn-out old woman now with gray hair, an' you're young an' spry; you was years ago, while I'm faded an' homely," and poor Huldah's face grew sad at the thought of her vanished youth.

"It's no sech thing," stoutly maintained her old lover. "You air jest as sweet an' pritty to me as ever you was, an' to-morrow we'll pay a nice little visit to old Parson Dexter an' we'll learn John Alden a lesson."

BALLOT-STUFFING NOT NEW

Old Colonial Records Show Act Was Attempted in 1656—The Punishment.

It is not necessary to give up our pious faith in the superior political morality of our forefathers when we learn that even in the first generation of Bostonians was found a ballot stuffer.

The same record which reveals this break records also its instant repudiation and punishment. It was on the fourteenth day of January, 1656, 25 years after the settlement of Boston, according to the quaint records preserved of the king's chapel, that a referendum was held as to whether a part of the land should be alienated.

The old chronicle runs: "The inhabitants proceeded to bring in their votes; and when the Selectmen were receiving 'em at the Door of the Hall they observed one of the Inhabitants, viz., John Pigeon, to put in about a dozen with the word Yea wrote on all of 'em, being charged with so doing, he acknowledged it, and was thereupon Ordered by the Moderator to pay a Fine of Five Pounds for putting in the settlement of Boston according to the more than One Vote according to Law, and the Moderator thereupon declared to the Inhabitants that they must draw and bring in their Votes again in Manner as before directed, and the Inhabitants accordingly withdrew and the Votes being brought in and sorted it appeared that there were Four Hundred and two votes and that there was two hundred and five Yeas and one hundred and ninety-seven Nays."—Boston Transcript.

KEEP LANGUAGE AND CUSTOMS

Dutch Impress Clearly Visible Among Inhabitants of Old Villages Up the Hudson.

Dutch language and customs still prevail to a surprising extent in the old villages up the Hudson, according to Peter C. Barker of Buffalo, N. Y.

"The modern housekeeper from the city," said Mr. Barker, "who takes a picturesque dwelling, built about 1690, for a summer home, is confronted by some bewildering conditions. First among these are words of one pronunciation in Dutch and English, but of totally different meaning. For instance, her 'help' obtained from the village will probably glance about the kitchen after finishing her morning's work, and chant in a sing-song that might be pointed off thus: 'I ain't done no work—what I meant to do—this mawnin'—yet. An'—I'll jus' file up the kitchen floor. To the mistress' surprise the 'file' proves to be a mop, 'file' being old Dutch for any bit of cloth used for cleaning, from a wash cloth to a floor cloth."

"Another evidence of descent is the use made of water. The old houses were invariably located where advantage might be taken of a running stream, no matter how small. At a point near the kitchen door this was dammed, a water wheel inserted, and power obtained for the churn or turnspit. Today this power equals a motor for running an ice-cream freezer, a sewing machine, an egg beater or a coffee mill."

James Not a Candidate.

State Auditor Frank P. James, despite repeated statements to the contrary, is not a candidate for any office of any character. Auditor James himself is authority for this assertion.
But, to quote Mr. James:

"I not only am not a candidate for any office, elective or appointive, but no one could run fast enough to catch me and force a nomination on me. I have no intention of seeking the nomination for Governor either will I have anyone else seek it for me. My only ambition is to continue to give the office of Auditor my best efforts and to do my work conscientiously."

Concerning the financial affairs of Kentucky, Mr. James said in the first place, that he does not consider the situation one to cause alarm. "While an one interested in the affairs of the Commonwealth naturally would prefer that we not be in the present condition," said the Auditor, "Yet when we consider the asset which we have in the shape of the magnificent new Capitol and grounds, in place of the deficiency, we can feel that we have something to show for the latter.
Were it not for appropriations made without providing the sources of revenue, we would not be in quite the shape we are in now."

Woman's Ears Good Thermome- ter.

"A woman's ears are more reliable than the average thermometer," said an observing citizen Saturday as he watched the passing show. "When you see a woman hold her ears, it is cold, and no mistake. I take it that the temperature is always near zero when the fair sex have to resort to covering their ears with their hands."
"Men's ears are larger and more unprotected than women's," he went on. "A man's ears afford a fine area for the nipping winds, and as they stand on the head, they are always good targets. A woman usually has her ears covered with her hair or a veil, or partly protected by her hat.
When Jack Frost gets sufficiently keen to cause them to cover their auricular appendages with their hands, you can chalk it up that it is cold."

Proposed Legislation.

The charity organizations of Louisville have been investigating and find the tenement houses or many of them in a deplorable condition. A measure will be pushed in the next Legislature to enforce better and more sanitary regulations on the part of landlords and compel them to pay attention to the laws of sanitation and cleanliness.
It is a good measure and should be passed. This law will only apply to cities of the first and second class.

La Follette's Paper on Cannon.

In advance sheets of Senator La Follette's publication which reached Washington Friday. Representative George W. Norris, of Nebraska, one of the leading Republican insurgents of the House appears as author of an article entitled "The secret of his power," in which he bitterly arraigns Speaker Cannon as a despotic "iron duke" ruling the House of Representatives with a ruthless hand.

"Today, as far as the enactment of legislation is concerned," says Norris,
"The House of Representatives has about the same relation to the National Government as the appendix does to the human body—it has no well recognized function. For all practical purposes our National Government, like Gaul, of old, is divided to three parts—the Senate, the President and the Speaker."

Mr. Norris accounts the efforts of the insurgents to change the rules of the House and the fruitless results.
In the opinion of the Nebraskan, the great power lies in his authority to name the committees of the House.

Taft Surrenders to Cannon.

Senator Thomas P. Gore, of Oklahoma, speaking in Danville, Ill., the home town of Speaker Joseph G. Cannon, Friday night at the Jackson day celebration of the Democrats, attacked the stand pat tyranny of Mr. Cannon and Senator Aldrich declaring that they stood in the path of progress.
He asserted that President Roosevelt conducted affairs without their aid, but that President Taft had surrendered to them at the first summons.

Hey, Teddy!

A special from Santa Fe, N. M., says: "Jose Valdez, the crack shot, who knows a whole lot about bears and how to hunt them can now claim to be the champion bruin killer of the country."

"Friday afternoon he discovered a cave twenty miles from Santa Fe that showed unmistakable signs of being the winter habitat of bears. Valdez started a fire at the mouth of the cave and smoked out the bears."

"There were just thirteen of them in the cave and as they came out one by one, Valdez killed them, the job occupying less than one hour."

Government Against Burley To- bacco Society.

The Cincinnati Enquirer of Saturday says: "One of the most important suits in the annals of the country will be filed in a few days in the United States Court here for the dissolution of the Burley Tobacco Society. Involved in the case will be the Sherman Interstate Commerce law and the night riders, and the contest will be bitterly fought."

"For more than two months a force of United States Secret Service men, under the supervision of H. M. Hoagland as Special Agent, has operated from Headquarters at the Havlin Hotel."

"Mr. Hoagland is an ex-newspaper man, who has seen service as a member of an English regiment in South Africa and an officer of the Philippine Constabulary. He has conducted his investigations in the burly districts of Kentucky with much secrecy. He still declines to disclose his plan of campaign, but it is known that several hundred witnesses will be summoned from Kentucky when the trial come-on."

"An effort will be made to reveal all the acts of the night riders. Witnesses will be produced who claimed that they were compelled to flee to Missouri and other States to save their lives, and many of the most active spirits concerned in the night rider assaults will be brought here."

"The Secret Service men expect trouble before the Government gets through, and they are prepared for it."

"One of the strong points that the prosecution will try to bring out is that the Equity Society is in restraint of trade and that Cincinnati in particular has suffered severely because of the fact that instead of bringing their tobacco to this market the growers have built warehouses of their own."

"The independent tobacco men are backing the national authorities in the suit, and their best lawyers will assist the United States."

"The Equity Society will be defended by some of the most eminent legal lights in the country, including Senator Bradley, of Kentucky; former Senator Foraker, of Ohio; Elliott H.
Pendleton and Harmon Colston, Goldsmith & Headly, the firm of which Ohio's Governor, Judson Harmon is a member."

"Arrayed on the side of the independents and with the counsel for the Government will be Richard P. Ernst, Alfred C. Cassatt and Lawrence Maxwell. The District Attorneys of Southern Ohio and Kentucky, will cooperate fully in the matter."

"The battle royal which is of so much importance, will be fought out here. That the case is attracting widespread interest is indicated by the presence of a number of special correspondents of leading dailies and magazines. The Secret Service men acknowledge that their testimony is ready, and it only remains for the prosecution to fire the first gun, which is expected within four or five days.
The above mentioned suit does not seem to be worrying the Burley Tobacco Society people one bit, they have no fears in regard to not being in the bounds of the law."

Insurgents Busy.

Supported by the Democrats, the house insurgents succeeded in having the Ballinger-Pinchot resolution of inquiry so amended as to require that the appointment of the investigating committee shall be made by the House and not by the Speaker. The vote was 149 to 145.

Senator Thomas Introduces Bill.

Provided the bill introduced in the Senate Friday by Senator C. M.
Thomas, of Bourbon, is enacted into law, Kentucky will have a State Board of Forestry and Reserve, consisting of seven members, the Governor, director of the Kentucky Experiment Station and a State Forester to be appointed by the Governor and affirmed by the Senate and four citizens who first become members of the board, two shall be appointed for two years, the bill provides, and two for four years. All appointments hereafter will be made for four years. The bill carries with it an appropriation of $20,000 a year.
In this bill it is urged that the State is in dire need of a Board such as the one proposed. The Governor and director of the Kentucky Experiment Station are to be ex-officio members of the proposed board. The bill provides that the State Forester, to be appointed by the Governor with the approval of the Senate, shall furnish bond of $20,000. He shall have the power to purchase suitable forestry reserve.

The board under the provisions of the bill, shall have the power to employ a secretary at $1,500 a year, and a civil engineer and survey when needed. The bill further provides for the appointment of forest wardens.

The four citizens to be named as members of the proposed board, under the provisions of the bill, are to receive $5 a day for every meeting of the board they attend, not to exceed $100 a year.

Dies in Prison.

Old and feeble, but a crook to the last, E. Burns, one of the oldest convicts ever in the Frankfort penitentiary, is dead. Burns was 85 years old, and was sent to the prison from Danville for defrauding a man who was promoting the Danville and Scottsville railroad, a line which has never been started. Burns gave the man a bad check for $2,000 after having been awarded the contract to build the new railroad. He was sent to the penitentiary for five years and was 84 years old when he was admitted. He was not the oldest convict in the prison at Frankfort, one man being nearly 90. Burns died of apoplexy.
No one claimed his body and he was buried in the field where the bodies of the friendless convicts are laid to rest.

Women's Secrets

There is one man in the United States who has perhaps heard more women's secrets than any other man or woman in the country. These secrets are not secrets of guilt or shame, but the secrets of suffering, and they have been confided to Dr.
R. V. Pierce in the hope and expectation of advice and help.
That few of these women have been disappointed in their expectations is proved by the fact that ninety-eight per cent. of all women treated by Dr. Pierce have been absolutely and altogether cured. Such a record would be remarkable if the cases treated were numbered by hundreds only. But when that record applies to the treatment of more than half-a million women, in a practice of over 40 years, it is phenomenal, and entitles Dr. Pierce to the gratitude accorded him by women, as the first of specialists in the treatment of women's diseases.

Every sick woman may consult Dr. Pierce by letter, absolutely without charge. All replies are mailed, sealed in perfectly plain envelopes, without any printing or advertising whatever, upon them. Write without fear as with-

DISH THAT THEY ALL LIKED

Service of Jowl and Greens Made Hit at Dinner at Which Millionaies Sat.

In Lexington, Ky., where the old regime still exists in all its lavishness, a lady whose house is furnished with heirlooms gave a dinner party to a New York millionaire and his wife.

The Blue Grass lady had once heard her northern friends say that the best food they had ever eaten was in Kentucky, and it was nothing more difficult than corn pones, jowl and greens and buttermilk. The beautiful dinner at which the millionaire and his wife were guests of honor will long be remembered by those who went to it.

The hospitable board was set with Venetian glass, which belonged to the past annals of that fine old family. In the center was an epergne of the same piled with fruits, red apples, grapes, both black and white, peaches and pears. At the four corners were Venetian candelabra, and the beautiful wine glasses and decanters added a richness of color that was nothing less than dazzling. The dinner was wonderful, top, as the dinners always are at this famous house. Music played somewhere in the distance, there was much talk and laughter, and the northerners were enchanted; but there was to be a surprise, for at the third course where an entree would usually be served there was handed a great silver dish of jowl and greens.
Little crisp corn pones came with it and a crystal pitcher filled with, but terrible added the finishing touch. And this was the peice de resistance truly for every member of that dinner party took a second helping.

The Tickled Child.

The idea is firmly in the minds of many good people that laughter means happiness.

This accounts a great deal for the habit they have of tickling children.
If they did but know it, the wild shrieks and peals of laughter often betoken anything else but happiness.

To hold a child so that it cannot get away and tickle it until it screams with laughter is a wretched form of amusement.

It may work untold mischief upon the child's nervous system.

It is quite possible to bring on an attack of hysteria in this way.

More than that, it is bad for the child's temper. Several persons now grown up have confessed to a positive hatred for persons who thus tormented them.

A little of it is no doubt harmless, but it should never be done to a child who is not perfectly free to escape if he wishes.

—The heaviest snow in many years fell here Wednesday night and Thursday morning in many places twelve and fourteen inches. It did not come in the nature of a blizzard and was accompanied with little or no wind. There were no drifts and no serious damage has been reported.

—The hardware store of Miller & Best and the East Tennessee Telephone exchange with their contents were destroyed by fire Saturday morning. The fire originated from the falling of coal from the grate in the telephone office. Miss Linville, the night operator with her brother occupy rooms in the same building. Miss Linville answered a test call about 11:30. A little after twelve she was aroused from sleep by the stifling odor of smoke. When she went into the exchange the room was filled with fire and smoke. She and her brother narrowly escaped in their night clothes. Before leaving the office, however, she gave an alarm to the local manager, Mr. Collins. Every effort was put forth to notify the public. The Bourbon Home Telephone gave the alarm to its town patrons and notwithstanding the zero weather the citizens constituting local fire company responded at once. The Paris Fire Department was notified at once and came down with their engine on a special train, arriving at 7 a. m. The local company with our little engine did good work, and the Paris engine was not unloaded. The fire presented a brilliant sight, and it looked at one time as though the entire business block might have to go, but owing to the snow on the roof and the steel ceiling of the Miller & Best room the flames were confined to one room, namely the I. O. O. F. building and the office of Dr. Smith were in great danger several times. When the water began to play on the building the fire was practically under control, and that portion of the building at the rear of the I. O. O. F. building might have been saved had there been a sufficiency of water. Four cisterns were pumped dry. As the engine had to be moved from one to the other the flames revived before pumping would begin again. T. P. Judy and son becoming alarmed moved a part of their stock of groceries to the Christian church across the street. The furniture was moved from the I. O. O. F. Hall. Dr. Smith's office and the bedrooms above occupied by J. H. Hunter and Mac Grimes. The destroyed building is the property of Mr. C. E. Bryan, who is at present in Louisville, with an insurance of $3,500 on it. The loss of Miller & Best will probably reach $10,000 with only $2,000 insurance. The telephone loss is heavy. Miller & Best have reopened for business in the I. O. O. F. room adjoining their own. The telephone company has temporary quarters for long distance business at the grocery of Jones Bros. The work of taking the wreckage from the cellar began Monday. This is the second time through which Mr. Miller, the senior member of the firm, has passed through, as in 1884 this entire block was destroyed. Mr. Miller was then dealing in groceries. He bears up under this loss bravely and will come again. Mr. C. E. Bryan, the owner of the property returned home Saturday night.

Sunday morning about 1 o'clock the town was again aroused by another alarm of fire. Many thought the flames had broken out afresh in the burned building and there was considerable anxiety on the part of all who were awake, it was soon located and found to be in the home of Mr. U. S. G. Pepper. About 1 o'clock Mrs. Pepper awakened to find her bed room full of smoke. She aroused her husband and the alarm was given. The fire was soon located under the hearth, which with a part of the flooring, was taken up and the fire extinguished without serious damage. Had not Mrs. Pepper awakened at that time, this, like the other building, would have soon been in flames.

He is fitted by temperament with a keen appreciation of the praiseworthy, the beautiful and the humorous in life, an eager student of men and books, acquiring readily the gist of things. He is able to arouse interest and maintain it in those subjects which he offers to the public.

—Rev. Gerald R. Richards, of Toledo, O., writes: "We closed out course with Mr. Fred E. Baker in his lecture on 'The Lucky Number.' While it was a very stormy evening there were about three hundred present to hear Mr. Baker. It was the sort of an audience difficult to seize and hold, yet Mr. Baker caught them at the onset and held them to the close. By illustration and argument he opened their eyes to the fads and superstitions of the day and at the same time held before them ideals worthy of their best and avowed. It was a timely message, well wrought out and delivered in a happy manner."

The new City Council met in regular session last Wednesday evening. Quite a number of visitors were present, as it was the going out of the old and the coming in of the new body. Mayor Trotter called the meeting to order and after the preliminary work and some unfinished business he and the council stepped down and out, Mr. Trotter giving the gavel to Mayor-elect, W. P. Waddell. The election of officers and the appointing of committees was then in order. Mr. C. E. Bryan and J. T. Judy, the present incumbent, were nominated for clerk, Judy receiving the larger number of votes was elected. J. H. Burroughs and Ashby Leer were put in nomination for treasurer. Burroughs was elected. Joe Williams was unanimously elected City Marshall. O. H. Collier was victorious over J. W. Johnson for City Assessor. W. F. Carpenter and W. A. Butler and J. J. Peed constitute the finance committee. J. H. Warford, Rufus Butler and U. S. G. Pepper, light committee. The completion of the final arrangements of the street electric lights was discussed at some length. Permission was granted the electric light company to run their wires on the Bourbon Home Telephone Company's poles. Work will begin as soon as the weather permits. At 10:30 the Council adjourned.

THEATRICAL.

"GRAUSTARK."

"Graustark," at dramatization of Geo. Barr McCutcheon's novel by Geo. D. Baker, comes to the Grand next Friday, January 14, direct from conquests of New York, Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh.

No play has so electrified the theatrical world in a decade, and much interest is shown in the coming presentation. The book has been widely read and many are familiar with the captivating story. It deals with the adventures of a daring American and a "Princess" and unfolds a narrative of "A Love Behind a Throne." The play is in five acts and mounted with a lavish equipment of scenic effects and costumes, and interpreted by a cast of players that are seldom seen away from the Broadway theaters.

Both company and play have been showered with praise by critics in other cities, and it is said that "Graustark" sets a standard by which all dramatized novels will be judged in the future.

Mr. McCutcheon has given us a play that surpasses his "Prester's Millions." What will he do next? says a critic. There is no doubt of what this author can do, and his readers are anxiously awaiting the date of "Graustark's" engagement in this city. The play is in five acts and an elaborate scenic equipment painted by Cattle & Harvey in their New York studio is carried. Seats on sale Wednesday at Oberdorfer's.

Bill to Abolish Board of Control.

Senator R. M. Salmon, of the Christian-Hopkins district, has introduced a bill in the Senate providing for the abolishment of the present so-called bi-partisan Board of Control of Charitable Institutions consisting of four members appointed by the Governor, and creating in lieu thereof a board of three members to be elected by the Legislature, and who it is a strong presumption, would all be Democrats.

According to Senator Salmon, the present bi-partisan system is a farce, because if anything happens like the present Nuttall affair, for instance, he says the responsibility rests on both parties, while the Republicans take all the patronage of the State eleemosynary institutions. He says that a board elected under the provisions of this bill, would place the responsibility for the management of the insane asylums and Institute for the Feeble-Minded, on the political party electing the members of the Board, where it properly belongs. Besides the officials would report direct to the Legislature. It is a good bill and should be passed.

Nine Dollar Hogs.

The $9 hog arrived Friday at the Union Stock Yards in Chicago and his coming marked an epoch in high prices for hogs. With the exception of a short period in 1882, when swine sold at $9.35 per hundredweight, the $9 hog has not been seen here since the Civil War.

Continued intense cold impeding transportation and an apparent hesitation of producers to market their hogs are the prime causes of the abnormal advance. Hogs also made a new record at the Bourbon Stock Yards, at Louisville, Friday. The top notch was $3.90 the highest price ever known there.

Aeronaut Plans Polar Trip.

Dr. Frederick J. Fielding, of San Antonio, Texas, offers to build a hydrogen dirigible balloon, capable of carrying several persons, and the necessary outfit and sail to the North Pole, provided some responsible parties convey his outfit to a point in the far North and furnish him with a scientific to take observations.

Realizing the magnitude of the undertaking, Dr. Fielding, who is holder of several records for balloon flights, has compiled some figures. He estimates that such a balloon with engine and gas generating outfit will cost him about $15,000 that the bag must be capable of lifting about 2,000 pounds, that a gas tank must be carried to replenish the bag for the return journey and that he needs but three or four months of preparation.

Women's School Suffrage Bill.

School suffrage for women will be embodied in a bill which will be introduced in the Legislature now in session by Senator Claude M. Thomas, of Paris, and the Hon. Eugene Graves, of Paducah.

The bill is included in the code of the State Educational Commission and will be backed by the Kentucky Federation of Women's Clubs. The bill reads as follows:

"An act qualifying and enabling women to vote for the election of school trustees and other school officers chosen by the people, except such officers as women may be disqualified from voting for by the Constitution, and upon school measures or questions submitted to a vote of the people, and to hold common school offices, except such offices as women are disqualified from holding by the Constitution."

"Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Kentucky: "Section 1. That all women possessing the legal qualifications required of male voters in any common school election, and who in addition are able to read and write, shall be qualified and entitled to vote at all elections of school trustees and other school officers required to be elected by the people and upon all school measures or questions submitted to a vote of the people, and all women possessing the legal qualifications required as to males shall be eligible to hold any school office or office pertaining to the management of schools, provided, however that this act shall not apply to any election the qualifications of the voters at which are otherwise prescribed by the Constitution, nor to any office as to which the Constitution otherwise prescribes the qualifications of the persons eligible thereto."

"Sec. 2. In all places where a registration of the qualified voters is now or may hereafter be required women who are, by this act, qualified to vote shall be registered at the same time and place and by the same officers and in the same manner as male voters; their registration, however, being made in a separate book to be furnished by the county clerk as is prescribed by law in the case of male voters. And all the provisions of law relating to the registration of women qualified to vote by this act."

"Sec. 3. When the elections referred to in section 1 of this act are held on the same day with the State, county or city election, separate ballots, similar to those required in other elections, except that they contain only the names of candidates for school officers or questions relating to schools, shall be provided for women voters qualified under this act; otherwise the election shall be held according to the provisions of the general election law."

"Sec. 4. All laws or parts of laws in conflict herewith are hereby repealed."

Happiness and Luxury.

I believe that the popular idea of happiness is to be able to live in luxury. I have never tried it, but I feel somehow that it would be lonesome. There must be more zest in living the closer one gets to the rudiments of life. We hear women complain of dullness, and see them searching through the days and years for something of real interest to fill their hearts and atone for the things of which civilization has robbed them. The gentle village women whom I knew in my childhood had no such anxieties. There was no time for ennui, and I believe there was fineness and quality in their lives that is woefully lacking in the lives of women today.—From "The Ideas of a Plain Country Woman."
